Arts and Culture

While Baltimore has a wealth of resources and institutions, the city is often perceived as divided city along the lines of race, class and place (i.e. neighborhood). As a way to address disparities in a city with a long heritage of cultural traditions, Baltimore provides the artistic freedom and community space to be on the national forefront of creative expression and debate. Cultural expression has also taken form in action during times of reform, such as when four confederate-era monuments were swiftly removed in August 2017 in response to growing reverence for these structures among white supremacists.[1,2]

After more than half a century of population loss beginning in the 1950's, which resulted in the decline of more than a third of Baltimore's population, the city continues to be the cultural center of the metropolitan region. Arts and culture enliven the local economy and attract tourists and aficionados from around the country and the world. The city is home to the Enoch Pratt Free Library, the country's first public circulating library, the internationally acclaimed collection at the Baltimore Museum of Art, the one-of-a-kind Great Blacks in Wax Museum, and numerous historical sites such as Fort McHenry and the home of Frederick Douglass.

The linkage between the arts, local economies, and transformations of the physical and social character of a place around arts and cultural activities is evident in the growing presence of art and creative practices in Baltimore's three Arts and Entertainment districts: Station North (est. 2002), Highlandtown (est. 2003), and Bromo Tower (est. 2012). In 2017, a coalition of artists, business owners, and nonprofits has began the process to designate Pennsylvania Avenue as a Black Arts & Entertainment District.[3] The Avenue has a rich cultural history and was once the City's premier cultural and entertainment destination, home to famed night clubs, bars, and restaurants. Support from the State of Maryland in the form of official A&E district designation would help draw energy, attention and investment.

Baltimore is a city where arts and culture is always on display. Vital Signs 17 includes a total of eight arts and culture indicators, divided into four general categories: the public art category represents a permanent and localized medium of visual arts and culture, the public events category represents temporary activities to promote social interaction and cohesion, the arts and culture economy category represents the talent, economy, and capital that arts and culture cultivate and attract to Baltimore, and the public library category represents a locally-accessible system of community spaces.

Data

Vital Signs 17 tracks arts and culture indicators from four main sources: Baltimore Office of Promotion & the Arts (BOPA), Enoch Pratt Free Library, Department of Transportation,[4] and InfoUSA. These sources are citywide data inventories that allow for a comprehensive overview of arts and culture as well as a breakdown of data into the neighborhood level for further analysis. While additional related sources are available on location-specific scales, only citywide inventories are currently included in order to ensure consistency across all Community Statistical Areas (CSAs).[5] When possible, indicators are created by normalizing these data to the population size of each area. Normalizing data reflects the concentration of the indicators relative to the population, and allows for comparisons across neighborhoods over time.

1. Ober, Cara (2017, August 31). "Monumental Sites - Creative Responses to Baltimore's Confederate Monuments." http://www.bmoreart.com/2017/08/monumental-sites-creative-responses-to-baltimores-confederate-monuments.html

Public Events
Public events are temporary convening areas in public rights-of-way that generally involve community participation, input, and initiative. Beyond promoting neighborhood activity, public events are directly linked to increases in civic engagement overall.[6] Vital Signs tracks the frequency of public events through the number of event permits requested per 1,000 residents for activities such as parades, festivals, block parties, and marathons.[7]

Event Permits
Between 2016 and 2017, the number of event permits requested per 1,000 residents in Baltimore City increased to from 1 .7 to 12.0 per 1,000 residents. The CSAs with the greatest rates of event permit requests were Downtown/ Seton Hill (29.0 per 1,000 residents), Inner Harbor/ Federal Hill (13.9 per 1,000 residents), and Harbor East/ Little Italy (13.5 per 1,000 residents).

The CSAs that experienced the greatest increase in the rate of event permits requested per 1,000 residents included Downtown/Seton Hill (+12.9 per 1,000 residents) and Inner Harbor/Federal Hill (+2,4 per 1,000 residents). The CSAs that experienced the greatest decrease in the rate of event permits When possible, indicators are created by normalizing these data to the population size of each area. Normalizing data reflects the concentration of the indicators relative to the population and allows for comparisons across neighborhoods over time.

Public Art (from Vital Signs 16)
In 1964, Baltimore became the second city in the country to pass a Percent-for-Art law, which requires 1% of all capital construction costs go to toward public art. Since then, over 300 works have been publicly-funded as a part of this program, including murals, monuments, paintings, and sculptures. In 2007, the City of Baltimore created a nine-member citizen public art commission that reviews gifts of public art and administers the Percent-for-Art program.[8]

Public Art per 1,000 Residents[9]

Public art is defined by BOPA as city-funded artwork that "enhances the cityscape, quality of life, and artistic and -creative climate in Baltimore". [10] Monuments, murals, paintings, sculptures, stained glass, fountains, and mosaics are among the art forms counted in the public art indicator

In 2016, there were 1.3 works of public art per 1,000 residents in the City of Baltimore. The CSAs with the greatest rates of city-funded public art included Downtown/ Seton Hill (15.5 per 1,000 residents), the Waverlies (4.3 per 1,000 residents), and Greater Charles Village/Barclay (4.3 per 1,000 residents). Two CSAs, Mt. Washington/ Coldspring and Southeastern, had zero works of city-funded public art.

The CSAs that experienced the greatest increase in rate of public art included Midtown (+1.9 per 1,000 residents), and Greater Charles Village/Barclay (+1.3 per 1,000 residents). The CSAs with the greatest declines included Westport/Mt. Winans/Lakeland (-2.9 per 1,000 residents) and Oldtown/Middle East (-2.8 per 1,000 residents).

Number of Murals

City-funded murals are included in both the public art indicator as well as a separate indicator in order to track where they are emerging throughout the City. Murals, a highly visible and growing art form in Baltimore, capture community sentiments and history engaging both residents and visitors.

In 2016, there were a total of 295 publicly funded murals in the City of Baltimore. The CSAs with the largest number of publicly-funded murals included Downtown/Seton Hill (46 murals), Upton/Druid Heights (21 murals), Sandtown-Winchester/Harlem Park (18 murals), and Washington Village/Pigtown (18 murals). Fourteen CSAs had zero publicly-funded murals. Between 2015 and 2016, the number of publicly-funded murals in Baltimore City increased by 69 murals. The CSAs that increased in number of murals included Upton/ Druid Heights (+14 murals), Sandtown-Winchester/Harlem Park (+12 murals), and Midtown (+12 murals). The CSAs that decreased in number of murals included Westport/ Mt. Winans/Lakeland (-10 murals) and the Waverlies (-4 murals).

Arts and Culture Economy[11]

The arts and culture economy encompasses a diversity of industries that create employment and stimulate the economy allow for educational opportunities in the arts and related fields, market and brand a city or neighborhood, contribute to creative placemaking and the reuse of spaces for communities, and brand and market a city or neighborhood. These industries range from spaces where the arts can be enjoyed, such as theaters or art studios, to institutions of learning that teach visual, musical, and performing arts, to businesses that involve creative skill sets, such as architecture firms or advertising agencies.

Vital Signs 17 includes both rates of and number of persons employed in arts-related businesses, which are defined as belonging to industries that allow for the consumption and enjoyment of arts and culture, and rates of businesses and number of persons employed in the creative economy, which is defined as industries that use and support artistic and cultural skill sets to attract and generate capital, knowledge, and information [12]

Arts-Related Businesses

From 2016 to 2017, the number of arts-related businesses in Baltimore City remained steady at 0.6 per 1,000 residents. The CSAs that experienced the greatest increase included Dickeyville/Franklintown (+0.25 businesses per 1,000 residents), South Baltimore (+0.2 businesses per 1,000 residents), and Greater Govans (+0.1 businesses per 1,000 residents). The CSAs with the greatest declines were Downtown/Seton Hill (-1.1 businesses per 1,000 residents) and Inner Harbor/Federal Hill (-0.4).

9. Due to InfoUSA's survey methodology, which consists of compiling a list of publicly-available phone numbers to conduct a sample phone survey, some businesses, such as those without landlines, are not represented. Additionally, firms with multiple branches may report total employment out of a single location, distorting employee counts by geography. For this reason, year-over-year comparisons of the data are not recommended

10. Data on publicly-funded public art comes from the BOPA. While several examples of privately-funded public art exist in Baltimore, these data are not tracked by BOPA or by any one source. Comparisons of these indicators from previous Vital Signs reports may be difficult due to improvements in how the BOPA tracks publically-funded public art.

12. For a complete list of SIC and NAICS codes used to define arts-based and creative economy industries, see Arts & Culture Economy Indicators

In 2017, the CSAs with the largest rate of arts-related businesses per 1,000 residents included Downtown/Seton Hill (7.6 businesses per 1,000 residents) and Midtown (3.7 businesses per 1,000 residents). Clifton-Berea, Dorchester/Ashburton, and Westport/Mt. Winans/Lakeland had zero arts-related businesses per 1,000 residents.

Arts-Related Employment

In 2017, the CSAs with the largest number of persons employed in arts-related businesses were Inner Harbor/Federal Hill (1,070 employees), followed by Downtown/Seton Hill (657 employees), and Midtown (552 employees). Clifton Berea, Dorchester/ Ashburton, and Westport/Mt. Winans/ Lakeland had zero persons employed in arts-related businesses.

Creative Economy Businesses

The rate of businesses and number of persons employed in the creative economy includes arts-related industries From 2016 to 2017, the rate of businesses in the creative and adds other creative industries, such as architecture, marketing, and publishing.[13]

From 2016 to 2017, the rate of businesses in the creative economy in Baltimore City decreased slightly from 1.4 to 1.3 per 1,000 residents. The CSAs that experienced the greatest increase include Midway/Coldstream (+0.3 - businesses per 1,000 residents) and North Baltimore/Guilford/Homeland (+0.3 businesses per 1,000 residents). The CSAs with the greatest decrease included Downtown/Seton Hill (-2.2 businesses per 1,000 residents), Greater Roland Park/Poplar Hill (-0.7 businesses per 1,000 residents), and Inner Harbor/Federal Hill (-0.5 businesses per 1,000 residents).

Creative Economy Employment

In 2017, there were 15,477 persons in Baltimore employed in the creative economy, a decline from 16,090 in 2016. The CSAs with the largest number of persons employed in the creative economy were Midtown (3,562), Downtown/Seton Hill (2,144), and Fells Point (1,590). Greenmount East had zero residents employed in the creative economy in 2017.

Library Membership[14,15]

Baltimore is home to the Enoch Pratt Free Library system, one of the oldest continuously operating free public library systems in the country. One of the most important community assets of a neighborhood is the local public library, which provides access to literature and information both as traditional print media and in digital formats. Public libraries also provide spaces for residents of all ages to engage in literary and cultural events, workshops, and educational activities. In 2013, Pratt libraries began offering classes to educate members about how to download e-books onto digital devices and continued expanding digital resources, which may explain some increases in library membership

13. For a complete list of SIC and NAICS codes used to define arts-based and creative economy industries, see Arts & Culture Economy Indicators.

14. Data obtained through a data-sharing agreement from the Enoch Pratt Free Library. Library membership data for 2015 onwards counts all active card types for all members of a household with a membership card, including library cards that do not expire. Previous totals for registered borrowers/active library users did not include users who have a library card that does no expire. For these reasons, comparison of the data between years is not recommended.

15. Please note that the Vital Signs 17 data is based on the Enoch Pratt Free Library fiscal year 2018 data (July 1, 2017-June 30, 2018).

Although this indicator is categorized within the Arts and Culture section of Vital Signs 17, it is easily associated with education indicators, as libraries are places for preschoolers to adult-learners, as well as workforce and economic development indicators, providing a place for free access to Internet resources.

Persons with Library Cards
Between 2016 and 2017, the number of persons in Baltimore with library cards per 1,000 residents decreased from 313.2 to 266.1 per 1,000 residents. The CSAs that experienced the greatest decrease in persons with library cards per 1,000 residents were Midway/Coldstream (-90.5 per 1,000 residents), Midtown (-77.2 per 1,000 residents), and Cherry Hill (-73.3).

The CSAs with the highest number of residents with active library cards included Cherry Hill, despite having a decline from 2016 to 2017, at (411.1 per 1,000 residents), The Waverlies (403.7 per 1,000 residents), and Patterson Park North & East (436 .2 per 1,000 residents). The CSAs with the lowest numbers of residents with active library cards included Morrell Park/Violetville (74.7 per 1,000 residents) and Cross-Country/Cheswolde (116.1 per 1,000 residents)..
